TO THE PUBLIC.

THE subscriber, after a lapse of time necessarily consumed in the preparation of his house, respectfully announces to the citizens of Alexandria, as well as the community at large, that he has taken for a term of years that noted and eligible establishment known by the name of the CITY HOTEL, and once occupied by Mr. Gadsby, whose distinguished abilities as a Publican gave it an eclat which the subscriber hopes to preserve by his unremitted exertions in affording to all those who may confer on him the favor of their patronage, genteel and comfortable accommodations. The subscriber deems it unnecessary to indicate the multiplicity of conveniences attached to the City Hotel, and will only submit a description to that portion of travellers who have so generally attested its numerous advantages.

NOTICE.

LAST NIGHT between the hours of seven and eight o'clock, was stolen from the house formerly occupied by Mr Lawes, now occupied by Miss Hellen Gullatt, two Bedquilts, one of which being remarkable had a large sized leaf with a dark ground diamond, being also of furniture calico, and quilted by the leaf, also by the diamond—the other being a diamond and star, with a large star in the center, quilted chiefly in shells—also a banket and linen sheet. Whoever will apprehend the thief, and deliver the things to this office or to Miss Hellen Gullatt, shall be generously rewarded. Should they be offered for sale, it is requested they may be stopped and information given as above mentioned.

ALEXANDRIA DAILY GAZETTE,
COMMERCIAL & POLITICAL.

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED BY SAMUEL SNOWDEN,
Royal-street, Alexandria.

Daily Gazette, 6 dollars per annum.
Country Gazette, 5 Dollars.

TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 20.

FOR THE ALEXANDRIA DAILY GAZETTE.

Mr. Snowden,

I beg your attention to the following FACTS; In doing which, it is not with the view of becoming the defender of Mr. Irvine, the editor of the Baltimore Whig; this would be an act of impotence and supererogation; but it is to vindicate the principles of democracy from as bold a charge, as the daring of invention could well justify to itself; the accusation of an individual would not have demanded the interference of another, had not his faith, the tenets of his belief, the doctrine of justice, been incorporated with the fraud and imposed on the public credulity; the sentiments of the man were given as the sentiments of the people, and the whole party denounced as objects of scorn and detestation. The fraud did not originate with yourself, but you became the innocent instrument of its dissemination, giving way to the honest indignity of your feelings, at a proposition, however accordant with other times, could but be viewed now as the harbinger of Cyclops, working chains for the free arms of ill-fated America, under the parricidal tyranny of a Caspii; and it is under the conviction that you will now discover the same alacrity in favor of truth, by correcting an error, which you were ambitious of being the first to expose, I make this communication, leaving it with your own sense of feeling, how far it comports with the dignity and policy of a party whose avowed object is the inculcation of truth and maxims of political justice, to publish to the world such falsehoods, as distinguished monuments of their own dishonor.

The proposition for a change in the government was not made by Mr. Irvine, but by an anonymous writer in his paper, whose excellent moral character, and in other instances sound political doctrine, and perhaps personal friendship, gained it admission under the signature of Messenger, but before this step was consented to, the editor of the Whig, accompanied it in the same paper with the following introduction and analytical notes, shewing as much his enmity to the proposal, as his commentators unjustly shew to him.

FREE THINKER.

FROM THE BALTIMORE WHIG.

WHAT A PROJECT!

[That a proposition so monstrous, as the author of the following number brings forward, could be conceived by a man of learning, a friend of freedom, and of exemplary piety, truly astonished the editor. He cannot publish it, without annexing a few brief comments, in form of notes.]

COMMUNICATED FOR THE WHIG.

"A gangrene has seized the national body politic. It is infected, it is morbid from head to foot. It has passed away. It is a mere nullity. It has no nerve, no efficiency, and it is in the last agonising spasms of a departing spirit."

"(1.) The great first source of all our troubles is an elective presidency. It was the downfall of Poland, and if persisted much longer in, will be the downfall of America. (2)

"If the American people are to have a change in their government, would they not wish it upon the principles already established? and if an hereditary president general (3) and commander in chief is at the close of the present administration to be assented to, would they not wish it from gratitude, from the name and the lineage of the saviour of their country; from the spirit of him who was the prime and efficient principal instrument, under God, to obtain their independence, and to rank them among the nations of the earth? Certainly, I think they would; and add also to said one member from each state, of most suitable character, renowned for dom, patriotism and respectability ing. This, with two competent for foreign and domestic departments, would form the grand and efficient council of the nation."

REMARKS.

(1) The finger of Heaven, as well as reason, justice, and common sense, seems to have pointed against hereditary rulers, in all ages. Moses, to whom Washington is compared, by "Messenger," was forbidden to enter the land of promise—and his descendants were not suffered to rule it. In after times of corruption, when the Israelites blindly called for a king, God sent a prophet to warn them of their danger, and protest against their folly.

"Then all the elders of Israel gathered themselves together and came to Samuel unto Ramah,

"And said unto him, Behold thou art old, and thy sons walk not in thy ways:—now make unto us a king to judge us like all the nations.

But the thing displeased Samuel, &c.—and Samuel prayed unto the Lord."

"And the Lord said unto Samuel, Hearken unto the voice of the people in all that they say unto thee, for they have not rejected thee, but they have rejected ME, that I should not reign over them."

As for Washington's "spirit," it has mounted to the skies; and his house is empty—he left no children; indeed, if he had, they would be, rather (according to the good Spartan maxim) the property, of the children of the republic, than the inheritors of power: for, there are no rights but such as the people confer, or nature creates. "The people have rights, says lord Lansdoune, but kings and princes have none.

I suppose, I will not be required to prove what Sidney has ably established, in his excellent reply to Filmer, that the patriarchs were not kings. "And since the Othman [Washington] family are extinct, I really fear we must import the discarded duke of York, with the first cargo of dry goods, or earthern ware! No! no! we are not prepared for monarchy, which is the project of Messenger.

(2) There is in fact no analogy between the political state of Poland and America. Consequently, the example of Poland is inapplicable to us. There, there was no people; a factious nobility, held the populace in vassalage; when they were rent asunder by jealousies and jars, the monarch was unsupported, and the country fell a victim to its own feebleness, and the rapacious ambition of surrounding monarchies; a memorable proof, that a free people, is the grand bulwark of a nation.

(3) "An hereditary president-general!" This is intelligible talk: and, for an American mos. unaccountable. "It appears to me horrible and absurd to the last degree, says Montesquieu, that a whole people should subject themselves to the caprice of one man, even if he were an angel. For my own part, I would not live under him a single day. This angel may become in a moment, a monster thirsting after blood." This is the language and impression of every genuine American. The day after his inauguration, this "president-general" may become "a monster;" or if not his descendant may be either a fool or a madman. The chief magistrate ought ever to be committed to the wisest and most worthy citizen; because he is the chief steward of the people: but make it hereditary; and there is no reward for service, wisdom or worth. To make office hereditary, you must exempt the officer from responsibility; a measure alike fatal to freedom and to virtue. "No person is free, where one person can commit crimes with impunity," With this irresistible truth, as with a Parthian arrow, did the eloquent professor Furguson transfix, the absurd tenet, prevalent in monarchies, that "the king can do no wrong."

Messenger, however, is not the only man who has, honestly I trust, imbibed erroneous opinions of democratic imbecility: Jefferson,—the great, the wise, the virtuous, the experienced, the venerable Jefferson, was aware of this growing heresy; he examined it, and very eloquently exposed it, in an unanswerable manner in his inaugural address: "If there be any [he well knew there were many] among us who could wish to dissolve this union, or to change its republican form, let them stand undistinguished, as monuments of the safety with which error of opinion maybe tolerated, where reason is left free to combat it. I know, indeed, that some honest men fear that a republican government cannot be strong, that this government is not strong enough. But would the honest patriot in full tide of successful experiment, abandon a government which has so far kept us free and firm, on the theoretic and visionary fear, that this government, "the world's best hope," may, by possibility, want energy to preserve itself?—I trust not. I believe this on the contrary, the strongest government on earth. I believe it the only one, where every man at the call of the law, would fly to the standard of the law, and would meet the invasions of the public order as his own personal concern. It has been said that "man cannot be trusted with the government of himself." Can he then be trusted with the government of others? Or have we found angels, in the form of kings, to govern him?—(3) Let history answer this question."

LIVERPOOL, Dec. 6.

Toulon Fleet.—The dispatches from lord Collingwood, given in our last page, have at length satisfied us as to the fact of an action in the Mediterranean, and its result. It has not realized the previous reports, nor our own hopes; but it has been as complete as the fears of the enemy will admit it to be. Had their whole squadron put to sea, it would have shared the fate of the partial division which the pressing necessity of attempting the relief of Barcelona obliged them to hazard; there had in that case been a Toulon fleet no longer.——The three line of battle ships, which were sent out of Toulon to protect the convoy, the French accounts had informed us, kept the whole English fleet at bay, and did them considerable damage; the fact turns out that without firing a shot, they all run ashore at the sight of rear admiral Martin's division; two were set on fire, and the loss of the other is inevitable. Probably Bonaparte would not have regretted this loss, though in the present state of the French navy a severe one, had the transports reached their destination, and effected their object. But their fears drove them into the nearest Spanish ports; and before they had time to unlade the whole of their cargoes, a gallant and meritorious attack of the boats belonging to the British squadron, completely frustrated their only remaining hope. The whole were taken or destroyed; the cargoes of three only having been landed. The stores cannot reach Barcelona, though they may afford a temporary relief to the French army occupied in the blockade of Gerona. This event, though of inferior magnitude as a naval exploit, affords the satisfaction, that the navy of France has not only suffered another deduction, but that its benefits will be felt by the Spaniards. The enemy's distresses accumulate and should Barcelona fall in consequence, the exploit will prove of vast importance.

From the London Guzette Extraordinary of November 29.

ADMIRALTY OFFICE, Nov. 29.

The honorable lieutenant William Waldegrave, of the Ville de Paris, arrived here this morning with despatches from vice admiral Lord Collingwood, the commander in chief of his majesty's ships and vessels in the Mediterrean, addressed to the honorable William Wellesley Pole, of which the following are copies.

Ville de Paris, off St. Sebastian, October 30, 1809.

SIR,

By my letter of the 16th of September, their lordships would be informed of the intelligence I had received relative to the intended movements of the French squadron, and of my reasons for changing my station to St. Sebastian.

While on this station on the night of the 22d instant, the Pomone joined, and capt. Barrie (who with indefatigable perseverance, had, with the Alceste, watched the port of Toulon) informed me, that the day before several of the enemy's squadron had put to sea, that others were coming out when he left them, and that there was every appearance of the whole fleet being on the move from the harbor. They had a numerous convoy with them, and as this movement was made with the first of an easterly wind, there was little doubt of their being bound to the westward. I immediately made the necessary signals for the squadron to be prepared for their reception, and placed the three frigates and sloop (Pomone, Hydra, Volontaire, and Minstrel) to windward, to give notice of the enemy's approach.

On the following morning, (the 23d) soon after 8 o'clock, the Volontaire made a signal for a fleet to the eastward; while they continued to come down before the wind, no alteration was made in the squadron, except by advancing two fast sailing ships the Tigre and Bulwark. At ten the Pomone made the signal, that the enemy had hauled to the wind; and the convoy separating from the ships of war, (which were now discovered to consist of three ships of the line only, two frigates, two smaller frigates or store ships, and a convoy of about 20 sail of vessels,) I ordered rear admiral Martin to chase them, and eight of the best sailing ships, which, standing on contrary tacks, might take advantage of the changes of the wind which was then variable.

At two P. M. the Pomone having got far to windward, was directed by signal to destroy such of the convoy as could be come up with; and in the evening she burnt two brigs, two bombards and a ketch. The enemy before dark was out of sight, and the ships chasing not much advanced, were standing to the northward, while the squadron with me stretched to the southward.—The next morning neither the French nor our chasing ships were in sight.

This morning rear admiral Martin joined with his division, as named in the margin, having again fallen in with the enemy on the 24th, and on the 25th they chased them on shore: the Robust of 84 guns, bearing the flag of rear admiral Boudain, and the Leon of 74, off Frontignan, where the day following themselves set fire to them. The Boreas of seventy-four guns and a frigate ran on shore at the port of Cette, where there is little probability of either of them being saved.

I cannot sufficiently express the high satisfaction I felt at the intrepid perseverance of rear admiral Martin, and of the captains of the ships who were with him in the pursuit. Nothing less ardent, or less skilful, would have produced a result so fortunate, where the coast near the Rhone was exceedingly shoal and dangerous, so that some of the ships were in five and six fathoms water, the weather thick, and the south east wind blew strong.

I enclose you, sir, rear-admiral Martin's letter; and beg to congratulate their lordships on three great ships of the enemy being thus destroyed, without the smallest resistance on their part, or a shot being fired by the British ships, except a few by the Tigre at the Boreas, when she was pushing ashore at Cette; of their two frigates, the Pomone and Pauline, one hauled her wind some time in the night and fetched into Marseilles road.

The other part of the French squadron are found to remain in Toulon by the ships which have since examined that port.

I have the hon or to be, &c.

(Signed) COLLINGWOOD.

Ville de Paris, off Rosas, Nov. 1, 1809.

SIR,

When the enemy's convoy was chased on the 23d ult. their transports separated from the ships of war, and, under the protection of an armed store ship, two bombards and a zebeck, made for the bay of Rosas. When the ships of war were disposed of, as related in my letter of yesterday, the convoy became the object of my attention, and on the 29th the Apollo was sent off Rosas to examine what vessels were there, and how far they were in a situation assailable.

The next day I appointed the ships as per margin,† for this service, under the orders of captain Hallowell, to bring them out if the wind was favorable or otherwise to destroy them. The state of the wind and sea would not permit this operation until last night, when, after dark, the ships bore up for the bay, and anchored about 5 miles from the castle of Rosas, under the protection of which castle, of Trinity Fort, and several other newly erected batteries, the convoy, consisting of 11 vessels, five of them armed, as per accompanying list, were moored.

The boats being arranged in separate divisions, the whole were put under the orders of lieut Tailour, first lieutenant of the Tigre, and proceeded to the attack of the enemy, who, although he could have no previous intimation of such an enterprize against him, was found vigilant and completely on his guard. The ship which was a smaller sort of frigate, was enclosed in boarding nettings, and a good breeze, advanced a-head of her for the look-out; on being hailed, and the alarm gun fired, our boats stretched out, the crews at the highest pitch of animation, filling the air with their cheers; each division took the part previously allotted to it; the armed ship was boarded at all points, and carried in a few minutes, notwithstanding a spirited and sturdy resistance which the enemy made. All their armed vessels were well defended, but the British seamen and marines, determined to subdue them, were not to be repelled, even by a force found to be double that which was expected; and besides the opposition made by the vessels, the guns from the castle, the force in the bay, the ...tin-boats and musketry from the beach kept a constant fire on them. On the opening of day, every ship or vessel was either burnt, or brought off, aided by the light winds which then came from the land, and the whole of the French navy in Spain has been destroyed, with the exception of the frigate, which escaped to Marseilles, and one store ship not since heard of.

I cannot conclude this narrative without an expression of the sentiment which the execution of this bold enterprize has inspired me with, and the respect and admiration I feel for those who performed it.

In the first place, success greatly depended upon the previous arrangement which was made by capt. Hallowell, with a judgment and foresight that distinguishes that officer, in every service he is employed on; the division of the boats, the preparation of fire materials, and providing them with every implement that contingency could require established confidence throughout the whole; and in this he was ably assisted by the experience of captains Wodehouse, Bullen, Taylor and Hope. The brigs were under sail, as near the vessels attacked as the light winds would allow, and captain Hallowell speaks in high terms of praise of the conduct of their commanders Crawley, Raitt, and Wilson. The first lt. Tailour, led to the assault in a most gallant manner, and was followed by the other officers, as each was ambitious of his place, and desired to be first; the whole party bravely maintained he character which British seamen have established for themselves.

I am sorry I have to add, that the loss has been considerable, of which I enclose a list. Lt. Trait, of the Volontaire, an excellent and brave young officer, and Mr. Cadwell, master's mate of the Tigre, a youth of great promise, were the only officers slain.

Many officers in the fleet were desirous of being volunteers in this service. I could not resist the earnest request of lieutenants lord viscount Balgome, the hon. J. A. Maude, and the hon. W. Waldegrave, of the Ville de Paris, to have the command of boats, in which they displayed that spirit which is inherent in them.

I transmit also capt. Hallowell's letter relating to his proceedings, with lists of the officers who commanded boats, and had appointments in this service, and of the vessels burnt and captured.

I have the honor to be, &c.

(Signed) COLLINGWOOD.

P. S. I have charged lieutenant Waldegrave, of the Ville de Paris, with the delivery of my despatches; an officer of great merit, and who commanded one of the boats employed in this service.

A list of ships and vessels captured & destroyed by the boats of the squadron under the command of Benjamin Hallowell, Esquire, captain of his majesty's ship the Tigre, in the Bay of Rosas, on the morning of the 1st of Nov. 1809.

Congress of the United States.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

MONDAY, February 19.

[Taken for the Alexandria Gazette.]

Mr. Newton, from the committee of commerce and manufactures, reported a bill "to remit certain fines, penalties and forfeitures." Referred to a committee of the whole house on Thursday next.

Mr. Clay, from the committee to whom was referred the volunteer army bill, reported the same with amendments ordered to be printed

Mr. Gardenier after a few preliminary observations in which he stated, that on account of the present exhausted state of the treasury, extremely anxious sensations had been excited among the people. The secretary of the treasury ought to be a man of clean hands, of undoubted purity. His character ought to be like that of Ceasar's wife, it ought not only to be pure, but without suspicion. He made these observations on account of some publications which had lately appeared in the newspapers against Mr. Gallatin. He here read part of a letter, originally published in the Virginia Argus; charging the sec'ry of the treasury with speculating in the public funds and on the public lands, and with draining the country of specie, by sending money to one of the Bonaparte's, on pretence of paying the interest of the public debt due in Holland. He thought this publication more important, as rumor had stated that it originated in the office of the secretary of state. He did not attach credit to these rumors, but he thought they deserved some investigation. He therefore offered the following resolution for the consideration of the house.

Resolved, That a committee be appointed to enquire generally into the conduct of the present Secretary of the Treasury, particularly whether the said secretary, has at any time, when and in what manner, and to what amount, speculated in the public funds; and whether the same secretary has become proprietor of any, and what tracts of lands, sold by the United States, and how the sales thereof have been conducted. And, also, in what manner remittances, either of principal or interest of foreign debt, have been made and whether money, and what cases, contrary to the inclination of the President, either as to amount or manner; and that said committee have leave to send for persons and papers.

A number of gentlemen spoke against the resolution, among whom were Messrs Burwell, M'Kim, Gholson, Taylor, Smilie, Johnson, Findley, Ross and Holland. Messrs. Quincey and Dana were also against instituting an enquiry on newspaper charges.

Mr. Gardenier defended his resolution. Messrs and Mr. Standford spoke in favor thereof.

At 3 o'clock the question on the passage of the resolution was taken and lost, ayes 37—noes 108.

Mr. Montgomery from the committee on the petition of the stockholders of the bank of the United States, reported favorably—the report was referred to a committee of the whole to-morrow, and ordered to be printed.

A message from the President by his secretary was received and read. It covered a number of letters and extracts of letters communicated in consequence of the call made by Mr. Moseley's resolution passed some days since.

THE first number of this valuable Work is just come to hand and is ready for inspection at the store of the subscriber, in King-street, and with Mr. Triplet, at the coffee house.

Fully aware of the impositions that have been practised upon the public by strangers soliciting subscriptions from distant places; the Editors invite their examination of a Work perhaps the most useful, entertaining as well as extensive in its kind that has ever been undertaken in any country. And they flatter themselves that the American will by no means shrink from a comparison with the London edition, tho' offered at six dollars per Vol. less.

This number may be considered as a fair specimen of the execution of the work, and will be left a short time for examination before the 2d number is put to press. After this the subscription will be raised to $2 25 each number; and but a few more copies printed than are sufficient to supply the subscribers, that the early patrons of this valuable Work may have a decided advantage—subsequent applications may therefore come too late.

It is also the intention of the Editor to annex to the last number a complete list of names of the subscribers as the patrons and encouragers of useful knowledge, the arts and literature of the United States.

Subscriptions are received by the subscriber.
